Jan 19, · Watch video · The Edith Hamilton translation of "The Trojan Women", which is used in this film, premiered on the Broadway stage in It was immediately acclaimed as being superior to the antiquated Gilbert Murray translation, which was the standard version used then/10(1K).

O misery! woe to us Trojan dames, soon to hear the order given, "Come forth from the house; the Argives are preparing to return." HECUBA Oh! do not bid the wild Cassandra leave her chamber, the frantic prophetess, for Argives to insult, nor to my griefs add yet another.

“The Trojan Women” (Gr: “Troades”) is a tragedy by the ancient Greek playwright Euripides. It was first presented at the City Dionysia of BCE, along with two other unconnected tragedies, “Alexandros” and “Palamedes”, and the comedic satyr play “Sisyphos”, all of which have since been lost to antiquity. The Trojan Women. Prologue: opening monologue by Poseidon. Poseidon seems to express remorse or at least nostalgia for Troy (also known as Ilium, thus the name Iliad). He calls himself the Trojan Horse, which perhaps is perplexing but also perhaps reflects Euripides' suspicion that what really brought down the walls of Troy was an earthquake. The Trojan Women (37) IMDb min NR Subtitles and Closed Captions Separated from their children and destined for slavery, the women of fallen Troy huddle within the parched wreckage of their once glorious city. The Trojan Women: A Play by Euripides Translated from the Greek into English and Adapted in Response to Aristophanes' and Aristotle's Criticism.

The Trojan Women earns a sympathetic but low 3 star rating from me. This is the type of film I want to come off. This is the same director that did Iphigenia and Antigone and both came off very Cast: Vanessa Redgrave, Irene Papas, Katharine Hepburn, Genevieve Bujold, Brian Blessed.
